If the Black Death did indeed have a direct impact on landowner building practices, it was chiefly in the area of self defense (Platt, 1996). The ostentatious castles of the late 14 th century were mainly used to restrain unruly tenants rather than to protect from war. Most of the building's expenses were covered by the landowners and ...

The Black Plague also resulted in severe depopulation and some immediate economic decline. However, with the extreme loss of life there was an overabundance of goods, a decrease in their price, a surplus of jobs and consequently a rise in wages. The standard of living actually increased. Also the need for paid workers resulted in movement away from feudalism and the development of a working class. All of these events
